Working Papers	Prison Rehabilitation Programs, Recidivism, and Labour Market Outcomes Job Market Paper Download paper . Abstract: This paper examines the impact of the Rehabilitation & Reintegration initiative, a prison-based job training and skills development program, on recidivism, labor market, and social outcomes. I use a difference-in-differences strategy to assess the causal impact of the program, introduced in the Netherlands in 2007. Drawing on rich administrative data from Statistics Netherlands and the Dutch Ministry of Justice and Security, I find that prisoners eligible in the program are 4.5 percentage points (14%) less likely to reoffend over a period of three years. The program also increases earnings, though only for native and older prisoners, and enhances stable housing and personal relationships. My results highlight the potential of rehabilitation programs in facilitating the successful reintegration of former prisoners into society.

Talent is Everywhere, Opportunity is Not: Online Role Model Mentoring and Students' Aspirations

(with Pietro Biroli, Amalia di Girolamo, and Giuseppe Sorrenti) Download paper.

Abstract: This paper examines the impact of ORME, a cost-effective and easily scalable online mentoring program for middle school students. By connecting students with successful role models who share similar socio-economic backgrounds, ORME aims to enhance students' aspirations, beliefs about the returns to education, and ultimately, their educational outcomes. Through a randomized controlled trial involving five middle schools and over 600 students in Campania, Italy, we find that participation in ORME significantly improves students' perceptions of effort-related success, increases the alignment between their aspirations and expectations, and enhances school effort. Additionally, students in the treatment group are more likely to prefer and enroll in the academically-oriented school tracks and perform better on standardized tests, particularly in language.
